SUNNY delight

Discover new inspiration for your garden in the heart of Kent

Combining the beautiful with the practical is the key to designing a successful garden. This year Jacksons Fencing is delighted to unveil two brand new show gardens to the public. The Natural Reflections garden by Alison Coxhead is a great example of using terracing and different coloured foliage for a simple but dramatic effect. This beautiful design also encourages wildlife and insects and provides a peaceful space to reflect on nature.

Meanwhile Kari Beadsell's Within the Weave by Kari Beadsell showcases Jackson's new range of fencing panels. These are a great way of creating a secluded nook in your garden where you can read in comfort or enjoy a spot of sunbathing. The woven panels are proving very popular and will add instant interest to your grounds.

Famous five

The five other gardens at Jacksons' Ashford headquarters have been refurbished to give them a new look. This is the third year of the project which has been hailed as a mini Chelsea Flower Show. Marketing manager Louise Tomlin says, "We wanted to create something more than just a fencing display so we decided to run a national competition for garden designers. The twist is that they had to incorporate our products along with other suppliers' so our visitors could get some ideas for their own projects."

The gardens are available for everyone to visit all year around, rather than the limited times that show gardens can be admired at the larger flower shows. "I am so excited about the two new schemes this year and the quality of entries made it very difficult to choose the winners but I hope our visitors will enjoy them immensely," says Louise.
